

HELLO!

By now, you have probably noticed something about our demonstration...

THAT'S RIGHT!

We're not consuming energy or other resources!

By using nothing more than what we were born with - ourselves - we're having a criminal amount of fun and sharing it with you FOR FREE!

Opting out of the vicious fashion and cosmetic loop that tells people the lie that they're incomplete until they're hidden away, we're also nailing shut the coffin of the industrial myth that nothing's worth doing that doesn't cause a hole in the ozone layer. We don't even need electricity -- just put some food in our bellies and we're ready to bring home our message to you:

The hollow ideology of consumerism cannot be an end unto itself, for you will never become satisfied swallowing emptiness. Instead of throwing your life away pursuing instantly-obsolete disposable consumer goods, consider that every penny left in your bank account when you die represents time you spent working in vain that could have been spent making friends with your neighbours, picnicking in the woods, writing love letters, and playing with your kids.

BUT HERE IS THE GOOD NEWS:

IT'S NOT TOO LATE!

Our society still has a chance to reconsider our devotion to transient material goods. Why not put the credit card away (or better yet, cut it up) and go give a hug to a loved one? When they are gone, you will ask yourself why you spent so much time financing purchases you can't remember instead of enjoying the company of people you can only remember.

HELLO!

By now, you have probably noticed something about our demonstration...

THAT'S RIGHT!

We're not consuming energy or other resources!

By using nothing more than what we were born with - ourselves - we're having a criminal amount of fun and sharing it with you FOR FREE!

Opting out of the vicious fashion and cosmetic loop that tells people the lie that they're incomplete until they're hidden away, we're also nailing shut the coffin of the industrial myth that nothing's worth doing that doesn't cause a hole in the ozone layer. We don't even need electricity -- just put some food in our bellies and we're ready to bring home our message to you:

The hollow ideology of consumerism cannot be an end unto itself, for you will never become satisfied swallowing emptiness. Instead of throwing your life away pursuing instantly-obsolete disposable consumer goods, consider that every penny left in your bank account when you die represents time you spent working in vain that could have been spent making friends with your neighbours, picnicking in the woods, writing love letters, and playing with your kids.

BUT HERE IS THE GOOD NEWS:

IT'S NOT TOO LATE!

Our society still has a chance to reconsider our devotion to transient material goods. Why not put the credit card away (or better yet, cut it up) and go give a hug to a loved one? When they are gone, you will ask yourself why you spent so much time financing purchases you can't remember instead of enjoying the company of people you can only remember.